CHENANGO COUNTY FAIR

TRADITION, TRACTORS, AND
NEW ATTRACTIONS:
A FIRST LOOK AT
THE 179TH
CHENANGO COUNTY FAIR

By R Laibowitz

NORWICH – One of the region’s longest-running traditions, the Chenango County Fair, returns Aug. 12-16 for its 179th year. It will showcase the county’s agricultural heritage while bringing a blend of family-friendly entertainment and new attractions. The Chenango County Agricultural Society has been preparing for it all year.

For the Chenango County Agricultural Society, founded in 1847, the fair’s longevity is a point of pride and a reflection of its mission: to promote public awareness of the agriculture industry, coordinate with Cornell Cooperative Extension (CCE) to provide youths with experience in agriculture, and present the annual county fair, providing a place to showcase local livestock, products and entertainment.

“The mission of the Ag Society is to present an annual event where we showcase the agriculture and horticulture of Chenango County for local competition,” said Mary Weidman, president of the Agricultural Society. “And over the years, it’s expanded,” she added.

A nearly two-century tradition going strong

The fair has evolved since its early days, when it moved around the county before settling permanently at the fairgrounds in Norwich. Weidman said harness racing was one of the first major attractions, where local people brought their own animals to race. Now, harness racing draws a large crowd and has become a separate event the day before the fair’s official start date. Eventually, the grandstand was built in the early 1900s, and carnival rides were introduced in the 1920s. Today, the fairgrounds span 35 acres and feature a full midway, livestock barn, exhibition hall, motorsports events and a packed entertainment schedule.

At one of the oldest county fairs in the state, agriculture remains the backbone. 4-H and open exhibitors continue to fill the hall/barn with animals, produce, household arts and floral displays, hoping to win a coveted ribbon. “That’s the aspect that continues annually, and that’s really why the fair exists,” Weidman said.

The fair also receives support from New York State Ag & Markets, like almost all county and local fairs do, according to Weidman. “This year’s Chenango Fair is a participant in the Ag Awareness Program, which New York State Ag & Markets sponsors,” Weidman said. “They give us some additional funds to promote agriculture.”

She explained that Ag & Markets helps the fair pay for premiums and participation in the exhibit areas. Thanks to that support, this year’s fair includes several free agricultural exhibits, including the Tired Iron Ag and Tractor Display, Ryans’ Yak Farm Ag Awareness Exhibit, Robin’s Heavenly Birds and the Garden Club’s Flower Show, among other free activities. The premiums also help cover the awards won by exhibitors.

As Chenango County remains connected to its agricultural heritage, the county fair continues to provide an outlet for recognition of history and hard work.

“People are proud of what they’re growing and producing. The fact that they actually bring it here and spend a week displaying it, and the time that it takes to nurture that; you’ve got to respect all of the time and effort, and love that goes into that,” Weidman said.

Family programming and free admission days

Wednesday, Aug. 12, and Saturday, Aug. 15, are Children’s Days at the fair. These days offer free admission for kids 12 and under, along with discounted ride wristbands from Coleman Brothers Shows.

The passport program is designed to encourage children to explore agricultural and educational exhibits across the grounds. Completing all six stops on the card earns a free ride ticket.

“In addition to coming and having fun, there are things to see, and do, and learn,” Weidman said.

Wednesday, opening day of the fair, is also a free day for all visitors, sponsored by NBT Bank.

Thursday, Aug. 13, is Senior Day. “We want to offer an opportunity for the seniors 60 and over to have their day at the fair,” Weidman said.

“This year we added free admission for veterans and active military when they provide ID,” Weidman relayed. The new initiative offering free admission to military personnel and veterans was inspired by community feedback and a desire to celebrate the nation’s history of independence.

New attractions join beloved favorites

Fairgoers can expect a mix of returning staples and fresh programming. “Tractor pulls are a stand-by and the demo derby is a given. We always have those because they’re crowd pleasers,” Weidman said. Opening day sees the annual firefighters parade. The parade begins at 7 p.m., taking off near the high school on Midland Drive and heading to the fairgrounds. Spectators can watch from the streets, then take advantage of the free coming to the Chenango County Fair. "That's going to be interesting. It's a free show in the entertainment tent," said Weidman, who mentioned that the fair had not had a wrestling show in quite a while and fair organizers hope it draws a crowd.

and Sunday will feature a Western and an English horse show that are still being planned.

One of the new additions this year is the Dinosaur Takeover Show, which was described as a multipart attraction featuring educational shows, a fossil tent and a themed miniature golf course. "So it's going to be fun for the kids and also an educational piece," Weidman said. A show will be held each day of the fair at varying times, sponsored by Steel Sales Inc.

As mentioned, tractor pulls and the demo derby remain cornerstones of fair week. Tractor pulls can be seen Thursday and Saturday. The New York Tractor Pullers Association (NYTPA) is scheduled to be there at 7 p.m. Thursday and Saturday, giving fairgoers a chance to see high-powered tractor and truck pulls, a personal favorite of Weidman, who once competed herself.

Fireworks, sponsored by Rentals to Go, will go off Friday at dusk. What follows is what fair organizers call Midnight Madness, when the carnival stays running until midnight.

He cited the support of the livestock auction is a direct reward to the perseverance and work ethic of the next generation of agricultural leaders.

CCE Association Team Lead Whitney Kmetz said the 4-H Market Animal Auction is much more than a livestock sale.

Kmetz explained the auction allows you to earn income from their livestock projects while gaining real-world experience in animal care, business management, marketing, record keeping, and responsibility.

Many of the participants use auction proceeds to support future projects, educational goals, or college expenses.

Participants learn: Animal care and management; Proper nutrition and health practices; Responsibility and time management; Financial record keeping;

Marketing and communication skills; Leadership and professionalism; Agricultural knowledge and animal husbandry; Decision-making and teamwork.

The 4-H Youth

This year's participants include 4-H youth from varying age ranges and clubs. They are Macie Vincent, Beth Wilcox, Jake Beers, Aubree Beckert, John Beers, Alexis Stemke, EmmaJane Beers, Maranda Schmidt, and Trevor Hess.

Macie Vincent is in her sixth year of 4-H and second year of selling at auction. She will be auctioning off her market lambs Buck Shot Roberts and Billy the Kid. She said her favorite part of livestock projects has been working with her lambs and learning patience in sheep care, especially in getting their wool ready for the show ring. This year's project holds a deep meaning to her heart as the proceeds from the livestock action will help her purchase a new western pleasure horse, replacing the one she recently lost.

Beth Wilcox is in her fourth year of 4-H and second year selling at auction. She will be auctioning off her market lamb, Junior and her Beef Steer, Tom. Beth enjoys working around their farm and all of the opportunities to work with livestock. She said her favorite part of her market project is spending time with the animals every day. She said she loves every aspect of taking care of her animals and is pleased with the results from her hard work and dedication. Living on a farm has provided Beth with the opportunity to hand pick her projects. Tom was born right on the family farm and Junior is her third project animal raised from the same ewe. Her plan is to invest her earnings from the auction for future goals.

Jake Beers is in his eighth year of 4-H and third year selling at auction. He will auction off his market lamb, Fred, as well as Processed Turkeys. Jake brings a wide range of animal interests and at twelve years old, his goals are to establish his own breeding trio of turkeys to produce poult for future markets. He is also working to build a registered Southdown sheep flock and hopes to grow it into a production herd and said this year's auction will continue helping him invest in future goals.

Aubree Beckert has been with 4-H for four years and has two years selling in the auction. She will auction off her market goat, Spongebob, market lamb Wooley, and stew-er rabbit, Ralph. Aubree is a member of the Ribbon Wranglers 4-H Club and loves working with animals. One of her favorite parts of the project has been watching her animals grow and said "Ralph has become really sweet along the way." This year, she learned how to sheer sheep, clip goats, and properly care for rabbits. She said her proceeds from the auction will be put in savings to help her work toward future goals.

John Beers is trying his first year at the auction and has been in 4-H four years. He will auction off his market goat, Gary and two ducks, Curly and Moe. John is a member of the Jolly Green Giants 4-H Club and has big goals set for this year including learning all about feeding, conditioning, training, clipping and showing. Caring for his goat helped him discover what it takes to raise quality market animals.

Living on a farm has provided many opportunities to care for animals, especially this spring when John helped deliver baby goats. One of Johns favorite things about 4-H is learning by doing. He said he hopes to save his auction money for a future purchase of a registered Belted Galloway Cow.

Alexis Stemke has enjoyed five years in 4-H and has four years selling at auction. She will auction off her market goats, Rose and Betsy, and lamb, "Ewe" Niece. Alexis has an extensive background working with animals and said through this project she learned sheep and goats can coexist quite well. One of her favorite parts about raising livestock is watching the animals interact with one another and become part of the herd. She looks to one day own her own farm and veterinary service and said proceeds from the auction will go toward savings and reinvesting in future livestock projects.

EmmaJane Beers is counting six years with 4-H and looks forward to her first year selling at auction. She will auction her pigs, Dill and Pickles, as well as Processed Chickens. Although this is EmmaJane's first time participating in the auction, she has years dairy calf to expand her livestock experience. The proceeds from this auction will help her work toward that goal, setting some savings aside for her future calf project.

Maranda Schmidt has been in 4-H for nine years and is preparing to sell in her first auction. She will auction off her market lambs, Karen and Bubba. Maranda has learned some valuable lessons along the way and said one lesson was in shearing sheep and said it is much easier to shear sheep after they’ve had a bath and it’s always important to make sure the gate is latched. Her favorite moments during the project have been learning her animals’ personalities, especially Karen, who Maranda said is “A very funny sheep.” Along her journey, Maranda has Rinoa Brown is in her fifth year with 4-H and second year selling in the auction. She will be selling her market hog, Erza. In all of the fun and muddy adventures that come from raising her hog, she said her favorite part of the project has been learning about swine growth and development, plus spending quality time with Erza during training. Rinoa has plenty of experience raising market hogs and shared her last pig, Inosuke, weighed 263 pounds. She has some long term goals set and hopes to raise and breed pigs of her own, eventually to purchase a Trevor Hess has three years under his belt with 4-H and has joined the auction for his first time. He will auction off his market lambs, Tank and Maple. Through the project, Trevor gained valuable skills in animal care and responsibility, working daily with his lambs. His favorite part has been watching them grow and improve on the halter. He said he learned how to train them to walk, set up properly for the show ring, and develop into strong market animals.

Trevor hopes to become an APA and ABA poultry judge and someday serve as a DEC officer and said his auction proceeds will be reinvested in the family farm and help him continue his agricultural journey.
