A SIMPLE TRIBUTE TO AN ENTERPRISING CITIZEN

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian Harriett Geywits

It was a sad day for the community on April 30, 1908 when Edgar Cary died. He was a man of many talents who believed in the village and people of this area. He carried on this belief instilled in him by his father and he passed it on to his heirs.

Edgar Cary was born in Springfield, NY on April 26, 1834. His father, George B. Cary was also born in Springfield and spent most of his life there as a farmer, afterwards engaging in business in Richfield Springs. George, at the time of his death in 1886, was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Richfield. His family was honored in the days of the Revolutionary War by his grandfather, Col. Richard Cary, who served as an aid to Washington's staff. George had been a resident of the village for over fifty years and was one of the founders of St. John's Episcopal Church.

Edgar attended school in Richfield and at Lodi Seminary. After completing this phase of his education, he went to New York City where he joined four other young men from Richfield Springs engaging in operating a grocery store at the corner of Greenwich and Murray Streets.

He later came back to Richfield and began the study of law in the office of James Davenport. Admitted to practice in 1859, he went into partnership with Mr. Davenport, continuing with him for two years.

When the war broke out in July 1861, Mr. Cary enlisted in what was then known as the Harris Light Cavalry, which was later known as the Second New York Cavalry. He saw active service during his two years there. He was at the battles at Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Brandy Station, Cedar Mountain, Antietam and Chancellorsville. It was said that his comrades gave him credit for being one of the bravest and most popular men of his company. He was accorded minor promotions for service in the field and a commission for a substantial promotion to sergeant which was signed about the time he was discharged for disability. Because of his disability he had to return home and it was a long time before he regained his health.

When his situation finally improved, Edgar opened a law office at Richfield where he had a large clientele until his destiny changed in 1871 when the American Hotel came into his family. He was one of the heirs of Gen. William P. Johnson, owner of the American from 1839-1871 and Edgar was the one who took over the management of the hotel for three years until the property passed out of family ownership.

Edgar then took over the management of the Cary Cottage, the boarding house established by his father George. The Cottage became one of the most popular stopping places in Richfield and he enlarged the facilities several times.

After the burning of the Spring House, a local stock company was formed and purchased the bathhouse of Thomas R. Proctor. Mr. Cary was one of those who invested in it, feeling that its continuance was essential to the success of the village. He served as the manager during the summer season and gave it his full attention.

Edgar Cary was a Democrat in politics and was one of the few in that party who was successful in being elected supervisor of Richfield Springs. He served many years as trustee and president of the village.

He married Harriet Johnson and they had one son, John Derthick Cary, born in 1859. The qualities of commitment to the betterment of others were to be carried on by his son as they worked together in running the Cary Cottages.

On the day of the funeral for Edgar Cary, all businesses were closed as a tribute to the gentleman who had spent his life serving others.

John D. Cary was to continue on with his father's legacy. He was a graduate of Hamilton College and Harvard University and a member of St. John's Episcopal Church where he was very active in their work, organizing Sunday schools and preaching. He was a prominent public speaker and a member of the Board of Education as well as school commissioner for the district.

He continued with management of Cary Cottages and built an new cottage adjacent to the other boarding houses, the third of the group. John D. Cary was listed as the architect, the only building he ever designed. There were over sixty men who worked on the building that became known as 'the big house'.

His first wife was Martha G. White. Following her death, he married Eva J. Willse and then Virginia Gould Blue who died in 1935. John D. died in 1938 of a heart attack. Surviving were two sons, Richard E. Cary and Lucius G. Cary and a daughter Miss Margery Cary.

As a tribute to his friend, Thomas R. Proctor gave a gift to the village of twenty-five acres to be known as the John D. Cary Park for the use and benefit of all the people. One of its special attractions was a thirty-two ton boulder which was placed at the summit of the knoll.

The Cary family was to carry on the public spirit that had been inherited through the years from their ancestors, working for the betterment of those around them.
